

another backroad adventure

One of the best parts of summer is taking time for a drive. Whether going to or from a family vacation, taking a day trip, or out for a short drive with the dogs summer is a great time to look for creativity in the wild. This pastime is not for the closed-minded or the over planner. You must be open and willing to expand your definition of creativity and embrace your adventurous spirit. While on the road I've tracked dinosaurs, jack rabbits, pink elephants and a jumbo lobster to name a few. In the creative painting medium I've discovered beautifully painted barns, building murals, water towers, rocks, and even some crazy cars. Once you "tune-in" you'll be amazed how many forms of creative self-expression you'll spot in the wild. In the garden variety of creativity I've discovered bottle tree gardens, rock gardens, train gardens and even a shoe tree! So grab your favorite music, choose a back road, and take it slow and easy. Cruise along with the windows down listening to your tunes and enjoy spotting creativity in the wild!
